"First Stop: the New World"

Come kick off the first-ever Passport to the Arts concert! Its "First Stop" will celebrate the compositions of North and South American composers performed by amazingly talented faculty of K&S Conservatory. Featuring special guest Julie Amacher of Minnesota Public Radio as emcee, you'll hear works by William Grant Still, Leonard Bernstein, jazz composers, and many more that will invite you into a world of music and education.

When not teaching, the amazing K&S faculty are performing concerts throughout the world, conducting expert ensembles, performing with professional orchestras, and some even composing their own music. Now is your chance to enjoy the local talent of these amazing musicians!

Did you know that William Grant Still was the first African-American composer to conduct a major American symphony? Did you know that Leonard Bernstein composed the music for the major motion picture, West Side Story? In addition to hearing the music of these composers, you'll hear a little information about each piece as the concert progresses. About Passport to the Arts

K&S Conservatory's program, Passport to the Arts, has been in development since 2007. Its mission is to provide the best opportunities for music and arts education to students, families, and members of the surrounding communities by using innovative and creative methods that inspire and motivate interest in the arts.

Chaz Fautch, Executive Director, created Passport to the Arts as a way for the students of K&S Conservatory and members of the surrounding communities to come together and enjoy the wonderful gift of music and the arts. Aware of the extraordinary talents the faculty of K&S possess, he was eager to develop a program that would allow the community to enjoy what these fine musicians have to offer.

"When I was a student in piano, long before I ever began performing professionally," Mr. Fautch describes, "I went to concerts expecting to be a little bored, only to come out inspired and motivated to practice and perform. Hearing my own teachers perform was an even bigger motivator for me to work hard. I created Passport to the Arts because I want our students at K&S to have those same experiences that inspired me and others to blossom into the musicians we are now, and also to share these events with the people of Woodbury and its neighboring cities."

Joining together with Andrea Wheeler, Assistant Director, brought Passport to the Arts even further. Their joint efforts to create a concert and program that would benefit K&S students and local audiences have brought the program where it is today. With the help of a wonderful team of committee members, Passport to the Arts continues to develop its future goals of providing music workshops for local schools and groups, and expanding its current annual concert into a multi-concert series.

October's concert is the first step to what will surely be a strong artistic and educational outlet in Woodbury.
